

V-Rooms Launches 3G Virtual Data Room at ACG Intergrowth - Miami

V-Rooms Virtual Data Rooms launches its third generation solution to address the expanding need for comprehensive project management of a program or transaction that goes beyond merely managing the document or files associated with a deal.

Atlanta, Ga. (Vocus) April 20, 2010 -- V-Rooms, a division of Due Diligence Online, LLC and a leading provider of virtual data room (VDR) solutions, announced today that company management will be staffing the exhibit booth at the Association of Corporate Growth (ACG) InterGrowth 2010 Conference in Miami (May 4-7), and that it will launch several enhancements to its virtual data room program at the conference.

The primary group of the features that V-Rooms is adding to its virtual data room solution are in the area of communications tools. These include the ability for users to interface with MicroSoft Outlook, specifically in being able to exchange event calendaring between the user's Outlook program with a calendar embedded in the home page of the virtual data room. Likewise, listings of project/deal personnel (with thumbnail photos), announcements and external links will improve the communications between users and administrators.

"We have recognized the need of introducing a third generation (3G) VDR to expand our solution beyond the static handling of documents and files, into assisting in the active management of personnel and responsibilities, hence allowing the virtual data room to become truly a Communications Portal." said Dan Bradbary, CEO of V-Rooms.

Also included in these features is the ability to capture emails from MicroSoft Outlook into a repository in the program. This new feature has been added to assist companies in meeting the increasingly stringent regulatory requirements to retain all communications relative to a deal or transaction. V-Rooms' enhanced communications features provide a powerful tool to users of its virtual data room solutions. As always, the focus remains in providing clients with the most user-friendly and economical virtual data room application available.
